

Video Storyboard

Group Name _____

Shot number

Shot number

Shot number

Shot number

What are we seeing?

What are we seeing?

What are we seeing?

What are we seeing?

What are we hearing?

What are we hearing?

What are we hearing?

What are we hearing?

Shot number

Shot number

Shot number

Shot number

What are we seeing?

What are we seeing?

What are we seeing?

What are we seeing?

What are we hearing?

What are we hearing?

What are we hearing?

What are we hearing?

Video Storyboard

- Storyboards are used to plan out your video so that you can ensure you don't forget to include something in your final edit.
- Planning each shot helps you to consider what you are communicating and how it will be seen by your audience.

A simple diagram of what the shot will look like, helps to visualise how the video will come together. Examples of types of shots include animation or live action which can be a wide angle or close up. The shots may also include pictures, diagrams and/or text,

Add notes of any talking, music or sound effects.

Shot number 5

What are we seeing?
Sarah points to her left. Picture of equipment top right of screen.

What are we hearing?
Sarah talks to camera, listing equipment. Quiet background music.

The shot number will assist in ordering your filming sequence during editing. Remember, you don't have to film everything in order, and you may decide to come back later and reshoot certain shots

A few words to accompany the diagram of what the shot will look like.